"Wrought ironwork was originally published by Rural Development Commission under the title Wrought ironwork in Great Britain"--Copyright page. Excerpt from The Creed and the Year: A Manual of Instruction for Sunday Schools The advantages of these two features are apparent teachers find themselves beginning the book when they begin their teaching; and the Christian Year is the Creed over again, or our belief in company with our days. The matter must speak for itself. Free use has been made of various Manuals, though generally with much re-arrangement and change of language; but a large part of the composition of the book is original. Attention is especially called to a natural and interesting order of the questions, which it has been the aim of the author to give to them throughout. The Manual is not graded for scholars of different ages, the author believing that it belongs to the teacher to adapt the instruction to the class, and that there is no material here furnished that may not be suggestive to a teacher of the youngest scholars while the older classes will find that which will take them as deeply into the various subjects as it is desirable for them to go. A bar at the side of the more difficult questions indicates which may be Omitted at the discretion of the teacher, which seems a simpler plan than having two or three different editions graded for the different ages. It has also another advantage: in going over the book a second year, or even a third, with the same classes, - which is very desirable, in order to imprint the truths upon the children's minds - the questions with the bar against them which had been omitted may be used. To new scholars and schools the book is, of course, always new. In schools where there is a long intermission in the summer, teachers may form a new course, for use on all but the greater days of the Christian year, for a third or fourth year's study, out of lessons that had been omitted. Although the Manual is upon the Apostles' Creed, it gives in each instance where it occurs the fuller statement of the Nicene Creed, and the reasons there for; and, although it is upon the basis of the Creed alone, it will be found that a thorough study of that takes us over a large part of the ground of the Catechism and of the Bible. For the convenience of teachers and scholars, the Catechism in full has been printed at the end of the book. Excerpt from The Science and Geometry of Dress: Being a Complete Manual of Instruction in the Art of Designing, Drafting and Cutting Ladies's Children's Wearing Apparel, an Entirely New and Original Method of Teaching This work, in its general design, is intended by the author as a complete Guide, Instructor and d104-Book on measuring, designing, drafting and cutting ladies' and children's clothing - suited not only to the studies of the school-room and the requirements of the professional Artist in Dress, but also to that large class of ladies outside the profession whose industry is chiefly confined to the home-circle. In the plan herein adopted will be found all the essential rules and directions contained in our former instruction book, first published in 1867, entitled the "Family Dress Guide," besides many important additions suited to the advanced stage of the Art, and specially applicable to garments of modern style and construction. The chief object of the "miniature method" of drafting, designed to be used and applied in connection with the elementary rules of this work, is to facilitate the teaching of this science in schools and classes, as also to reduce the labor and time required in imparting instructions. The diagram illustrations herein given are intended to impress the mind of the pupil in advance with the general plan and outline of the garment to be drafted, this rendering subsequent labor easy and intelligible. In conclusion, as a matter of special importance to the rapid advancement of the pupil, the author would urge a strict adherence, while under instructions, to the use of the Miniature Dress Guide and the average measures as printed on the diagrams. Excerpt from The Government Class Book: A Manual of Instruction in the Principles of Constitutional Government and Law

The study of the principles of political science is a necessary part of a liberal education. In a country where the people govern themselves the science of government is a necessary part of a common-school education. In the United States the people elect their own law-makers and rulers, establish their own constitutions, and determine, even the fundamental principles upon which men shall be governed. The danger of entrusting such power to the ignorant has not failed of illustration in our States and cities. Having universal suffrage, the people must learn to govern themselves for the sake of their own preservation and welfare. Nor is a knowledge of the principles of legal science less necessary to every citizen. The laws of man know as little of mercy as the laws of nature, in that law never admits ignorance as an excuse for wrong. It is a proof of the essential justice of our system of jurisprudence, that so many citizens pass safely through life, totally ignorant of the law, and relying merely upon their own sense of what should be. And yet every day gives proof that ignorance is always dangerous. The study of such a work as this will not make a youth a lawyer, but it will fix in his mind a system of broad principles, which cannot fail to be useful practically. This means that we wish to see ourselves in heavenly light; that all self-delusion should be banished from us. address on Swedish Movement and Massage Treatment, delivered before the Clinical Society of Maryland in March, 1888, appeared in several medical journals, I have frequently been asked by the medical profession to write a manual, and also to give instructions on the subject. Although there are numerous articles and books on massage, there are, to my knowledge, no manuals of Swedish movement and massage treatment in the English language which give any information how to apply the treatment in different diseases.
